Preface

In 1982 when I was staying in the Kathmandu Valley as a member of a research project team of the Institute for the Study of Languages and Cultures of Asia and Africa, Tokyo, Prof. B. D. DANGOL, Chief Research Officer of the National Archives, Kathmandu, showed me a book entitled Devatācitrasaṃgraha, which is a collection of line drawings of the deities of the Hindu pantheon. This book stimulated my interest in Nepalese Hindu iconography.

When I visited the Kathmandu Valley again in 1984, I came to know that the Devatācitrasaṃgraha represents a redrawn version of two sets of illustrations which are preserved in the National Archives, Kathmandu. When I examined the line drawings in the original manuscript form, I immediately realized their importance. A systematic collection of drawings of Hindu deities like this one seems to be very rare. Therefore, I have been looking for an opportunity to reprint these illustrations along with the text on which they are based.

Recently the Centre for East Asian Cultural Studies, Tokyo, started a new project to reprint important manuscripts from Asian countries. I am grateful to the Centre for including this publication in the Bibliotheca Codicum Asiaticorum series.

In March 1989 Dr. GUDRUN BÜHNEMANN came to Nagoya as a researcher, supported by the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science, Tokyo. I suggested her to work on these drawings of Hindu deities and the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya on the basis of which they were prepared.

The present book consists of two parts. Part 1 discusses the authorship and the contents of the single chapters of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya and describes the iconographic features of the deities depicted in the collection of illustrations. Part 2 reproduces the illustrations of the deities from two Nepalese manuscripts and provides the Sanskrit text of chapter 6 of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya on which these illustrations are based.

The text of this chapter has been reproduced here twice. Section 2.1. gives the text from the printed edition of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya (Kathmandu 1966) which circulates only in a limited number of copies and is difficult to obtain outside Nepal. As the text of chapter 6 of this edition is corrupt in some parts, section 2.2 reproduces the text also from manuscript 4.331 of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya, preserved in the National Archives, Kathmandu. The photos are reproduced on the basis of negatives obtained by Mr. T. FUKITA, Graduate of the Bukkyo University, Kyoto, who was dispatched to Kathmandu in May 1989 as a member of a project called "International Joint Research and Photographing of Manuscripts for the Publication of Bibliotheca Codicum Asiaticorum." On this occasion I would like to express my thanks to the Tokyo Club which sponsored this project.

I would like to express my thanks to Prof. B. D. DANGOL, National Archives, for the permission to reproduce manuscript 1.1314 entitled sacitrapatrāṇi, sections of manuscript 4.331 entitled Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya, and chapter 6 of the edition of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya published by the Rājakīya Pustakālaya (also Royal or Durbar Library).

Introduction: On the Present Edition of the Illustrations

The illustrations presented here are a collection of line drawings depicting the deities of the Śaiva pantheon as described in chapter 6 of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya (= PLSS).

In 1962 BUDDHISĀGAR ŚARMĀ and BĀBUKṚṢṆA ŚARMĀ brought out a version of this collection, entitled Devatācitrasaṃgraha, which was intended to form the first part of an edited text of PLSS. Its introduction does not give any information about the source of these illustrations. They represent a modernized redrawn version, which according to oral information from BĀBUKṚṢṆA ŚARMĀ, is based on two Nepalese manuscripts. Whereas the original manuscripts bear remarks in Classical Nevārī, this modernized version provides Sanskrit headings, which in many cases are already an interpretation of the original readings.

The present publication reprints these two sets of illustrations in their original form from the only extant illustrated manuscripts depicting the deities according to PLSS descriptions.

The drawings printed on the upper half of the pages form part of manuscript 4.331 (subject: dharmaśāstra 605) entitled Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya, which is in the possession of the National Archives, Kathmandu, and also preserved by the Nepal-German Manuscript Preservation Project, Kathmandu (no. A 517/16). It is dated N.S. 765 (=A.D. 1645) and consists of 116 folios of text plus folios with line drawings. These folios are numbered from 1 to 28, but folios 16 and 17 are missing. An appendix of eight unnumbered folios illustrates the "Sixty-four Yoginīs according to the Devī-Purāṇa" (according to the remark on the margin) that are not described in PLSS. These Sixty-four Yoginīs are forms of the goddess described in chapter 50 of the Devī-Purāṇa (=DP). These drawings were added later to those of the Sixty-four Yoginīs described in PLSS according to the "Brahmayāmala."

The drawings printed on the lower half of the pages have been reproduced from manuscript 1.1314 (subject: dharmaśāstra 1048) labelled as "sacitra-patrāṇi," which is also in the possession of the National Archives, Kathmandu, and preserved by the Nepal-German Manuscript Preservation Project, Kathmandu (no. A 544/6). These folios do not contain the PLSS text. They are numbered from 1 to 28 and have an appendix of eight unnumbered folios illustrating the "Sixty-four Yoginīs according to the Devī-Purāṇa."

The style of the illustrations in both manuscripts is similar; and the headings naming the deities are identical. Both manuscripts seem to be copies of the same manuscript, or one of them may be a copy of the other. Both sets of drawings have been reproduced here, as the first manuscript is incomplete, and the second one indistinct in some places.

The motive for bringing out another edition of these illustrations is to make this important collection of drawings available in its original form as a source material for the study of Hindu iconography.

1. The Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya

1.1 On the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya and Its Author

PLSS is a work on the construction and installation of liṅgas compiled from various Āgamas. The text was edited by DAMODARA ŚARMA and BABUKṚṢṆA ŚARMA on the basis of seven manuscripts from Kathmandu and was printed in two parts in Kathmandu during the period 1966-1968. The text is also called Lakṣaṇasārasamuccaya, Lakṣaṇasaṃgraha, and Lakṣaṇasamuccaya in the colophons of the single chapters.

Vairocana, the son of Dhīranātha[1] and the grandson of King Gopāla, is mentioned as the work's author.[2] Dhīranātha is supposedly the dīkṣā name given to King Dharmapāla after he became a Śaiva ascetic.[3] This would establish the following genealogy: Gopāla—Dharmapāla (Dhīranātha/Dvāranātha) —Vairocana. The identity of these kings is not clear. According to RAY [2]1973, p. 384, Gopāla I (ca. A.D. 765-769) and his son, Dharmapāla (ca. A.D. 769-815), figure among the Pāla Kings of Bengal and Bihar. However, placing Vairocana in the eighth or ninth century is impossible, if we consider the following circumstances. PLSS mentions that Vairocana was a disciple of Īśānaśiva[4], who was a disciple of Vimalaśiva, who was in turn worshipped by King Nirbhaya[5] and was born into the Mattamayūra lineage of the Śaiva sect.[6] This establishes the following spiritual lineage: Vimalaśiva—Īśānaśiva—Vairocana.

No details are given about Vimalaśiva. He probably is the author of the unpublished Tantra Vimalāvatī, three manuscripts of which are preserved in the National Archives, Kathmandu.[7] The name Vimalaśiva also occurs in two inscriptions pertaining to the Mattamayūra lineage: (1) the Jabalpur Stone Inscription of Jayasiṃha (SHARMA 1978, p. 24), where Vimalaśiva appears as rājaguru of Jayasiṃha, and (2) the Malkāpuram Pillar Inscription (ibid., p. 25), where Vimalaśiva is mentioned without further details. Īśānaśiva mentioned above is probably the same as the author of the Īśānaśivagurudevapaddhati. The date of this work is not known, but it has been ascribed to the later part of the eleventh century[8], which would figure as the lower limit for fixing the date of PLSS. The upper limit would be the year A.D. 1168, the date of the oldest manuscript.[9]

PLSS professes to be a compendium based on several Āgamas (cf. 1.2). One text referred to several times in PLSS is the unedited Piṅgalāmata[10], also known as Pratiṣṭhākalpa, by Śrīkaṇṭha, which belongs to the jayadrathādhikāra and is ascribed to the Brahmayāmala. The oldest known manuscript is dated A.D. 1174.[11] The contents of this work[12] show close similarity to PLSS.

1.2 Contents of the Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasārasamuccaya

PLSS consists of 32 chapters, called *vidhi*s (ritual procedures), which are printed in two parts. The first part contains vidhi 1-11 and the second part vidhi 12-32. The titles and contents of the chapters are as follows:

1. Liṅgadravyanirṇayavanapraveśa
   The etymology of the word liṅga; the importance of liṅga worship; different materials from which *liṅga*s can be made and results obtained by their worship; the procedure of entering the forest to obtain the material and omens to be observed at that time.
2. Kartur ācāryādiparīkṣā
   The qualities required of the performer installing the liṅga; the selection of qualified architects and officiants.
3. Dāruśilāgrahaṇa
   The ritual for the collection of wood and stones; criteria for the selection of these materials.
4. Avyaktaliṅgalakṣaṇa
   The dimensions of the "unmanifest" (avyakta) *liṅga*s[13], i.e., those made of stone and other materials.
5. Vyaktaliṅgalakṣaṇa
   The dimensions of the "manifest" (vyakta) *liṅga*s[13], i.e., those which are idols (pratimā, arcā).
6. Rudrādivyaktaliṅgavartana
   The description of the "manifest" *liṅga*s[13] that are idols of the deities of the Śaiva pantheon and the iconographic characteristics of the following list of deities:

2. The Illustrations

2.1 General Remarks

The collection consists of 254 line drawings illustrating the deities described in PLSS and 64 drawings illustrating the Yoginīs described in DP. Of the two extant manuscripts only manuscript 4.331 (depicted on the upper half of the page) is dated. It goes back to A.D. 1645.

The first section (1-17) starts with the Nine Śaktis of Sadāśiva (1), followed by the forms of Śiva. One can identify eleven forms of this deity, beginning with Śiva (2), of whom different variants are given, and ending with Umeśvara (15). These are followed by the Eleven Rudras (17). In both cases the important number eleven, associated with Śiva/Rudra since Vedic times, has been connected with these deities.

The second section (18-55) deals with forms of Viṣṇu, beginning with the common forms (18-20), followed by the Ten Avatāras (21-31), the group of Twelve Mūrtis (32-43), the Four Manifestations (caturvyūha) (44-47), and other forms (48-55).

The third section (56) depicts the god Brahmā.

The fourth section (57-86) illustrates the various forms of the goddess, including the Seven Mother Goddesses along with Tumburu (70-77). This section concludes with semi-divine beings (84-86), like the Apsaras.

The fifth section (101-174) includes deities connected with the sky. It depicts the sun (101), its forms and attendants (102-107), the Heavenly Bodies (108-115), followed by snakes (116-127) (they have probably been appended to the Heavenly Bodies, since they are frequently connected with the different directions of the sky), lunar mansions (128-154), zodiac signs (155-166), and directional guardians (167-174).

Other divine beings that do not fit in any of the previous sections follow in the last section (175-254). The Kinnaras appear in two places, once in human form (177) and once in unusual forms (181-189). The Sixty-four Yoginīs (190-253) are divided into eight groups assigned to the cardinal and intermediate directions. They are probably to be depicted in a yantra with Bhairava in the centre. Such yantras have been reconstructed by DEHEJIA 1986, pp. 209, 212-213, on the basis of several texts. The section in PLSS describing these Yoginīs (6.327-400) has been rather corrupted and needs to be re-edited carefully on the basis of numerous manuscripts. It should also be compared with the section on Yoginīs (from the Mayadīpikā) quoted in Caturvargacintāmaṇi 2/1, 92-102, which has also been corrupted. It has been edited and translated by MALLMANN 1963, pp. 294-303. MALLMANN studied the various lists of names for the Yoginīs, 1963, pp. 292-306, and more recently they were studied by DEHEJIA 1986, cf. pp. 194-218. MALLMANN 1963, pp. 304-305, provides a list comparing the names of the Sixty-four Yoginīs beginning with Akṣobhyā (190-253) as given in Agni-Purāṇa, chpts. 52 and 146 and Mayadīpikā, whereas DEHEJIA 1986, pp. 205-209, compares the names given in the Mayadīpikā, PLSS, the Śrīmatottaratantra, and chpt. 52 of the Agni-Purāṇa. DEHEJIA has for the first time analysed this section of PLSS and has listed the names, vehicles, and colours of the Yoginīs described.

2.2 The Appendix Depicting the "Sixty-four Yoginīs according to the Devī-Purāṇa"

Apart from the deities described in PLSS, the manuscripts depict the "Sixty-four Yoginīs according to the Devī-Purāṇa" (in an appendix, folios unnumbered). These drawings have been appended to those of the Sixty-four Yoginīs according to PLSS, whose description is said to be based on the "Brahmayāmala." The textual basis for the drawings in the appendix is chapter 50 of the DP which lists 60 forms of the goddess to be worshipped in different years. These 60 forms are divided into three groups of 20 goddesses, representing the highest or sāttvika forms, the medium or rājasa forms, and the lowest or tāmasa forms. Comparison shows close similarity between the 60 names given in DP and the 64 names given in the appendix. The appendix repeats four of the names (viz. Śivā, Siddhi, Raudrī, and Kauśikī) and ascribes different iconographical characteristics each time, thereby arriving at the number 64. But there are also variations in the names and the sequence in which they are listed. It has to be assumed that either a different recension of the DP was used when the appendix was prepared, or that the 64 names come from another tradition, probably based on the DP. Such a tradition is preserved in the daily recitation of the names of the Sixty-four Yoginīs which forms part of the daily worship of the Goddess at the Kāmākhyā Temple near Gauhati/Assam.[73] These names, which have been listed by DEHEJIA in her extensive study of the yoginī cult, 1986, p. 197, are said to have come from the DP. Apart from small variants in some names, they agree with the list in the appendix. A list of the names of the 60 goddesses according to DP is provided here with reference to the numbers of the illustrations in the appendix.

73 This has been reported by DEHEJIA 1986, p. 78 and 191.

74 Chapter 50 first enumerates all the names in verses 10-17 and later describes the iconography of each form in verses 84cdff. In the following list, the numbers in single brackets refer to the verses in chapter 50 of DP. The numbers with asterisks refer to the corresponding line drawings in the appendix.

75 Verse 100a reads Ṛpti (misprint).

76 A reference to this form occurs in the reading given in note 9 on verse 105 in the printed edition of DP.

77 Verse 12c reads Śakti.

78 Diti occurs also in group 3 as no. 19.

79 Verse 13b reads Vimohini.

2.3 Characteristics of the Deities

In the following sections certain characteristics of the deities depicted, such as colour, position and attributes, are introduced to provide the interested reader with variations of the attributes as well as original Sanskrit and Classical Nevārī terms which correspond to the English terms used in the table on pp. 30-51. Most of the Classical Nevārī words appearing in the manuscripts have been recorded in JØRGENSEN's Dictionary of the Classical Newārī. I have noted them as: (Nev.). Sometimes similar words appear in the dictionary. They have been noted in brackets. Words not appearing in the dictionary are marked: (Nev. ?).

2.3.1 Colours

The drawings in the manuscripts are line drawings and the colours of the deities are indicated by inscriptions on or above the figures, or not at all. The following colours appear:

blue —indīvara (53), nīla (e.g. 18), śyāma (e.g. 27);
brown—kapila (e.g. 102.7), piṅgala (e.g. 35);
dark (/black)—kha (varṇa) (169), hāku (Nev.) (e.g. 8), kṛṣṇa (e.g. 102.1);
gold —hema (e.g. 45), kānta (varṇa) (242), kuṅkuma (e.g. 32), suvarṇa/svarṇa (167, 122); see also yellow;
green —vāṅu (cf. wāṅu, Nev.) (102.9);
red —aruṇa ([dark] red) (e.g. 43), lāuna/lāvana (Nev. ?) ([light] red, corresponding to PLSS 6.270c: manāg rakta) (102.3), pravāla (coral) (40), rakta (e.g. 1);

82 Diti occurs also in group 2 as no. 9.
83 Verse 221c reads Carcitā.

Prof. Madhav Prasad Lamichhane Collection, Kathmandu, Nepal

smoky—dhūmra (102.11);
white —candrakānti(varṇa) (silver) (226), gaura (e.g. 24), hima (e.g. 17), pāṇḍura (98), sita (102.6), śveta (e.g. 12), toyu (Nev.) (e.g. 2);
yellow—pīta (e.g. 39); see also gold.

2.3.2 Postures

The following body postures are found:
dancing—with one knee lifted up (e.g. 7);
flying —with the legs in a "plough-shaped" (lāṅgalaka) posture (e.g. 178);
kneeling
—on both knees (84);
—on the left knee (52, 170);
reclining—lying down (49);
sitting
—if not specified, the right leg is loosely folded in front of the left leg in a kind of "easy" pose. The majority of deities are shown in this posture (e.g. 1);
—sitting astride (222);
—sitting comfortably: in this pose, which does not have a special name here, one leg is bent in front and rests on the ground while the other leg is raised with the knee bent and the sole placed on the ground (e.g. 64);
—lotus posture (padmāsana) (30);
—with yogapaṭṭa, an encircling band for the hips and knees (56,*20);
—squatting (e.g. 77);
standing
—if not specified, both legs are joined and the feet placed on the ground evenly (e.g. 18);
—ālīḍha/vaiśākha (sthāna), a standing posture with one leg advanced with a bent knee and the other leg stretched diagonally behind (e.g. 57, 247);
striding—one leg is on the ground and the other leg lifted up straight (26);
walking—the front leg is advanced and bent and the other leg is stretched behind (179).

2.3.3 Hand Gestures

The following gestures and hand postures appear:
biting the (extended) index finger (co-lā [Nev., index finger] vā nahāk [cf. wā ṅāya, Nev.—to bite]) (*64);
concealed (nigūḍhaka) (15);
extended (prasārita, pratānita) (7, 176);
gesture (mudrā) of
—explanation (vyākhyānamudrā) (e.g. 11);
—knowledge (jñānamudrā) (e.g. 175);
—meditation (dhyānamudrā) (e.g. 102);
—protection (abhayamudrā) (e.g. 9);
—purottāna (uttāna), shown with the palms facing upwards (e.g. 16, 88);
—salutation (añjali) (52);
—threatening (tarjanīmudrā) (e.g. 59);
—wish-granting (vara [da]) (e.g. 9);
—yoga (yogamudrā), with one hand (44), with both hands (13, 87); it is described in PLSS 6.102 and 6.182;
moving (valana) (7);
placed on the shoulder (unspecified) (62);
placed on the shank/thigh (unspecified) (e.g. *20, 117);
raised (unspecified) (e.g. 84);
tearing Hiraṇyakaśipu's chest (24).

2.3.4 Attributes

arrow (valā, Nev., vān, Nev.) (e.g. 8, 191);
—five arrows (51);

2.4 Table of Specific Features of the Deities

2.4.1 Principles Followed in Preparing the Table

The table on pp. 30-51 is provided as an easy reference to the special features of the deities that are depicted in the manuscripts. However, it does not replace a close study of the illustrations and their corresponding descriptions in PLSS, which differ occasionally. The following items are included in the table:

1. The consecutive numbers of the illustrations (in the main collection [1-254] and in the appendix [*1—*64].
2. The names of the deities according to the manuscripts. Deviations from the forms of the names used in PLSS have been noted. The reader may also refer to the list on pp. 13-19, which gives all the names as they occur in PLSS. References to the text of chapter 6 of PLSS and chapter 50 of DP have been provided in brackets.
3. The number of arms/hands of the deities
4. The number of heads
5. Body colours, if specified in the inscriptions on or above the drawings
6. Body postures
7. Seats (āsana, pīṭha) or vehicles (vāhana)
8. Attributes, including hand gestures of the deities. These are listed beginning from the deity's upper right (= R) hand to the lower right hand and from the upper left (= L) hand to the lower left hand, as they are shown and/or labelled in the manuscripts. In a few cases, the attributes do not agree with those mentioned in the printed edition of PLSS.

While preparing the list according to the manuscripts, orthographic variants, like śa/ṣa, na/ṇa, va/ba, and ra/la, shared with other manuscripts are not considered. It should further be kept in mind that the Nevārī script does not clearly distinguish between the letters pha/bha/ha.

All insertions have been included in angle brackets.
